FAMILY TIES

A family isn't one person-it takes more than one to form community. Then, as families grow, they give continuity and stability to a much larger community-the decisions made in a family eventually affect a village, a city, a province, a country. Families give these places their very identity, by passing on certain values from generation to generation. Of course, today people are questioning what the word "family" should mean. But even if family definition seems to be changing all around us, in some ways it doesn't matter: the dynamics are going to end up being the same.

Whether you live together under the same roof, or you drive 100 miles to be together, you still have to figure out how to share and deal with all of the challenges and problems of life. Family dynamics take place day by day. That's where we have to keep alert to conflicts, to keep things respectful and kind. Blessed Pope John Paul II said that the vocation of Catholic families is to reflect a "culture of life." That is, to live as if you value human life, respect human intrinsic dignity, and protect the God-given rights of all human persons from conception to natural death. That is the fullest meaning of the phrase, "pro-life." Pope John Paul II believed that this "culture of life" should also express itself in popular art, music literature, and media-as well as in our laws, schools, and political positions. A family is naturally the "cocoon" where the culture of life is nurtured. Many parents do what it takes to be good role models: sacrifice their own comfort, set firm rules and give up being popular with their children, in order to teach them discipline.

How can we overcome selfishness? On this feast of the Holy Family, let's start with these words: "To maintain a joyful family requires much from both the parents and the children. Each member of the family has to become, in a special way, the servant of the others."

Go in peace to love and serve our God!
(Feast of the Holy Family - Dec. 30th, 2012)
