Ruminations...

It is hard to believe that we are half way through July already. It seems like I was just preparing for the Canada Day holiday. I had planned to get the grass cut and my raised vegetable garden finished, that is after sleeping well into the morning with a lazy, relaxed morning as befits a national holiday. Well Mother Nature certainly put a crimp into those plans. It seems we had more rain on Canada Day than in the whole month of June. So instead of cutting or constructing or creating, I was reduced to watching, waiting and whiling. Every time there was a break in the skies, I thought about getting on the lawn mower but as soon as I got the motivation, another down pour arrived. It was a wasted day of watching out the patio doors finding a thin silver lining that at least I didn't need to water the gardens. But even watering the gardens had a simple pleasure on a free day – head phones in, shorts and sandals, basking in the sun and idly watering the plants. That was all well and good but it created a bit of a crunch for the morning following Canada Day. The Saturday started nice and sunny, but the grass still needed to be cut before the wedding at 1 pm and the grass did need a bit of time to dry up. So I headed out to get the grass cut. Now our lawn mower is pretty cool to drive. It is a Kubota Zero-turn vehicle that can bomb along at quite a clip. I put the lawn mower on high speed donned my headphones, set the iPod to my Bob Seger and Van Morrison play list, and raced across the front. Now it didn't look like it was cutting very well and it was difficult to see where I had already cut, but time was of the essence and I didn't have time to figure out if the blades were dull, and I put it off as the grass being too wet. I finished the front and the side by the car dealership and was starting the south side strip. I wasn't really happy with the job but at least it was done, almost, until I realized that I had forgot to lower the cutting deck, so instead of cutting the grass with the blades set at 3 inches, it was only cutting at 6 inches. That meant that I had to start over and get it done properly. The lawn looked great for the wedding, and the weekend, and no one was the wiser to my blunder. I guess it is true what they say, haste makes waste.
